“I've known Rachel for over 20 years. She has always been involved in Jewish causes, particularly with regard to the Shoah. When she created “Yiddele' Memory”, I gave her the best advices for the opening of an Organization. And when she created “the Kesselman Museum”, I naturally supported her and advised her. This Museum is a chance for all generations, for Jews and non-Jews, to touch on what Jewish life actually was like in Poland before the war. If visiting the death camps is essential, the visit of the First Jewish Open Air Museum in Europe is invaluable as it leads us through the daily journey of the Jews of Poland. Radomsko is a reflection of all the cities of Poland and allows us to figure out what was their life. To never forget”.
